

This exhibition resulted from an idea that formed in the days directly after Mum died. As the family gathered, we started looking through cupboards and drawers, finding clothing from the seventies, eighties and nineties - hot pants, caftans, shoulder-padded jackets, slinky black dresses. The clothes were colourful, glamorous, casual, dressy, quirky. Whether she made them herself or bought them, they always looked great on her, and she always took a little more effort with her appearance when she went to town.
